WEDNESDAY EVENING, AUGUST 22

INHERITED INGRATITUDE .- On one of the best farms in Orange county, located within a fow miles of Middletown, there lived a farmer who came into possession of his property, it is said, by defrauding his aged father out of it. He induced the old gentleman to deed the homestead and farm over to him, representing that he would be well taken care of during his declining years, and that were the property in his own name he would take more interest in it. No sooner was the deed made out and delivered than the son began a series of petty persecutions against his father, compelling him to perform tuites about the farm, overtaxing his strength, analyzing him from the family table and deals excluding him from the family table, and dealing cut to him in a gingerly manner sustenance hard y sufficient to keep soul and body together.

These acts of cruelty were carried to such an extent that the broken-hearted father was compelled to leave the roof which he himself had erected, and throw himself upon the charty of the world-at one time becoming an inmate of the county poor-house. Things went on in this way for some years, the son apparently prospering and accumulating quite a large share of this world's goods. He became suspected of several acts of dishonesty in dealing with his neighbors, and lost no opportunity to enrich himself at the expense of others. To such an extent did he carry his parismonious pratices that at last he endeavored to escape the payment of some of his just debts by secretly conveying his property to his son, little thinking that his own son would be so ungrateful to him as he had been to his father.

He thus successfully evaded the payment of

He thus successfully evaded the payment of his debts, but when he attempted to continue exandria at 2 45 p. m.

FRONT ROYAL ACCO. leaves Washington control of the farm an unexpected obstacle presented itself-the son proclaimed himself owner and refused to follow out his directions, or allow him in any way to control the preceds. Disputes and recriminations followed, until finally the sen ordered the father off of the premises, and refused to contributa to his support. to Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York, and to all points North and Northwest.

Ingretitute in every s econd generation is, no doubt, hereditary in the family, and it will be curious to observe what the present owner's son will do if he gets a chance.
